1. Jack Frost fades

Here it is, the first chapter of the redone story that was once titled Wizard Jack. I scraped the first attempt and am completely rewriting the whole story. **

>Jack Frost was paying a visit to his first believer and best friend, Jamie Bennett, when it happened. The sound of Jack's staff made when it hit the floor caused Jamie to jerk his head to stare at the Spirit a gasp of horror escaped his mouth at what he saw.

"Jack, what's happening to you?" He asked while he darted to him.

"Iâ€¦ I don't know Jamie but everything will be alright. I need you to alert the other Guardians for me, can you do that Jamie?" Jack replied as his body faded until he was no longer there.

"I promise Jack, I'll tell them." Jamie cried before Jack faded completely, leaving only his staff to show he had ever been there.

>In an unknown location, a new up and rising dark witch cast a powerful, dark, spell to summon four future heroes from their time periods to her time, not caring that she was messing with time or the consequences of what she was doing.

There's a flash of light that quickly died away to reveal four teens lying unconscious on the ground. The witch let out a cackle as soon as she saw them before her. Just as she was about to cast her next spell, to get them under her control, the brown haired boy woke up.

As soon as he figured out what was going on, he threw himself at the witch and managed to snap her wand in the scuffle, which left her defenseless. "You brat, look what you did to my wand!" She snapped before she vanished right before his eyes.

A groan behind him caused the boy to spin around to see three other teens, another boy and two girls starting to wake up. "Are you alright?" He asked as he went back over to them, helping both girls to sit up.

Before any of them could answer a loud popping noise sounded not far from them and all four of the teens flinched at the noise, their eyes widened as a man dressed in, what appeared to be, a green dress strode over to them.

"Damn, she threatened to do this but I didn't think she actually would." He muttered as he stared at the four of them. "I need to know your names so I can work on sending you back to where you belong. You being here will mess up your pasts and our future."

The boy who woke up first answered, "Jackson Overland Frost but everyone in my village calls me Jack."

"My name is Rapunzel and this is Pascal." The, extremely, longed blond haired girl said.

"I'm Hiccup Horrendous Haddock the third but you can call me Hiccup. This is Toothless, my dragon." The second boy answered as he rested a hand on said dragon's head.

"I am Merida Dunbroch of the clan Dunbroch of Scotland." The girl with wild red hair stated, proudly, last.

The man did his best not to panic when he learned their names, especially the girls, as he feared for his friends and family's lives. "Okay, now we really have to get you four back or history will be rewritten and certain people will vanish." He groaned.

"What are you talking about?" Jack questioned as the other three got to their feet.

"Huh, oh sorry. I'm Harry Potter and I need you to take hold of my arms so we can get to somewhere safe." The man responded. "I'll explain what I can once we're back at Hogwarts."

The four of them glanced at each other before Hiccup shrugged and placed a hand on Harry's arm, the other three followed his example, along with the black dragon, and they soon found themselves standing in the entrance foyer of a castle.

"Welcome to Hogsmead, the school for young wizards and witches is just up the hill." Harry said as the four humans and one dragon looked around in awe. "The students will be arriving in about a month as Headmistress McGonagall sent out the letters.

Until then I'll help you get used to making your way around the school as it will be your home until we can send you back. As for Toothless, well he'll have to stay outside but don't worry, I'm sure Hagrid will love to care for him."

That being said Harry turned and started for the carriage that waited for them. Merida, Jack and Rapunzel all followed Harry but Hiccup insisted that he would ride Toothless up to the castle. Once the carriage came to a stop, Harry stepped out and waited for the four teens to join him.

"You three may wait here while I take Hiccup and Toothless to Hagrid's hut then I'll take you to the headmistress so she can make arrangements on where you'll stay for the time being." Harry told them as Toothless landed next to them.

As soon as the four teens were taken care of and settled in, Harry left to return to his, now empty and silent home.

>The day after Jack had disappeared right in front of him Jamie sat outside on the porch, moping, when an owl landed on the railing in front of him and dropped a letter into his lap. "What is this?" He murmured as he picked up the envelope.

As he read it, his mother came outside to tell him lunch was ready and saw the letter in his hands. "I can't believe they managed to track us down." She murmured with a sigh. "Come inside Jamie and I'll explain about the letter."

He stood up and followed her without complaint though he did have a question. "So this isn't a prank then mom?" His mom shook her head no as she closed the door behind them then proceeded to settle onto the couch and patted the spot next to her.

Once he sat down his mother took a deep breath before she started, "Your father was a wizard, Jamie but not a good one. Before you were born there was a dark wizard trying to take over your father's world, your father had sided with him, and that's what got him killed.

After his death, I fled England and changed my surname in order to hide. I was pregnant with you at the time but didn't realize it until after I met your stepfather, who I fell in love with him and told him yes when he asked me to marry him."

"Did he know about your past?" Jamie asked.

"Yes, I told him everything but he didn't care that I'm a witch or that my first husband was bent on helping destroy everything the side of light stood for. So the question now is do you want to attend Hogwarts? If you do then I will move back to England so we can be closer together."

Jamie leaned back as he thought about it then his face brightened as he made his choice. "Yes, I would like to attend Hogwarts." He proclaimed.

"Alright, I'll send a reply to McGonagall then we'll only have to wait until our fireplace is connected to the floo network. While we'll waiting I'll pack up our stuff to make the move. I'll also give you time to tell your friends here bye." She stated as she stood up and went to get her wand.

2. Jamie arrives

Sorry it took me 'years' to update this fic but I am finally doing it, so you can all cheer.

>A month after they were forced into the future, Jack sat near the lake and looked out across the water, deep in thought. He let out a sigh as he blinked, two different memories running through his mind, one holding his mortal family and his life in the past, the other held a child with his hair and eye color along with a different family, an immortal one.

"Which set of memories is real?" He questioned himself, running a hand through his hair in frustration.

"Maybe they both are real memories." A voice suggested as Jack was joined by others. He glanced over to see Rapunzel, Hiccup and MÃ©rida, the four of them having become friends during the past month.

"I guess." Jack replied. "I just wish I knew who the boy is in the second set of memories, the one where I have white hair, blue eyes and am able to control some aspects of winter."

"You'll find out in time, I know it." MÃ©rida told him and Jack smiled at her gratefully. "We should get back up the castle, The students will arrive soon." She stood and held a hand out to Jack, Hiccup and Rapunzel stood as well so the four of them could head back inside.

Jamie eagerly climbed into a boat with three other first years, he had waited a month to get a glimpse of the school he'll be spending the next several month at. At his first look, Jamie was in awe at the size of it. "Wow, this is going to so cool!" He exclaimed.

The others in the boat agreed with him, as their mouths dropped open in awe, and they nodded without a word. Jamie chuckled at their looks then asked, "Which house do you think, or hope, you'll be in. I hope I'm placed in Gryffindor."

The boys answered him as they passed under the opening of a cave and stopped near a set of steps that lead up into the castle. Jamie joined the rest of the first years and Hagrid as the climbed up the steps.

Jack, MÃ©rida, Hiccup and Rapunzel were sat at a table McGonagall placed in the great hall for them when the students came into the great hall and separated according to the house they were in. Minutes after the older students were seated the first years were led into the great hall to be sorted.

At the name "Bennett, Jamie," Jack jerked up straight in his seat to get a look at the boy. "Guys, it's him. The boy from my future set of memories." He whispered as Jamie was sorted into the house he wanted and jumped down to join the Gryffindor table.

Before the other three could say anything, and to their surprise, Jack was called up to be sorted. He hesitantly stood up and walked up to sit on the stool, the sorting hat being placed on his head.

Jamie was getting to know his housemates when a name being called caught his attention, "Frost, Overland Jackson." He gasped as a brown-haired browned eyed boy, who looked remarkably like the Spirit of Winter, walked up to be sorted.

"No way, it can't be." He mumbled.

"Do you know him Jamie?" A older student questioned as Jack was sorted into Gryffindor.

"Yes, or at least I think I do. If he had white hair and blue eyes then he could pass for the Spirit of Winter, Jack Frost." Jamie answered as Jack made his way over the Gryffindor table, only to plop down next to Jamie and meet his stare with his own.

"Jack...?" Jamie hopefully asked as he looked at the former child Guardian.

Jack smiled down at him, "Hello Jamie... I remember your face along with certain others from this time but am unable to place names with their faces. Maybe you could help me?"

"Of course but not right now with others close by." Jamie beamed up at Jack as food appeared on the table as the last person was sorted and everyone began to eat.

Since they had a day before classes would start Jack and Jamie stayed up later than anyone else, just talking and Jamie promised to himself that he would send word to the Guardians about Jack as well as ask his mom to send him Jack's staff so he could give it to Jack.

The next day when Jamie woke up the first he did, after showering and getting dressed, was sit down to write a letter to his mom then Tooth, as she was the closet, to let the Guardians know about Jack. Once done he ran to the owly to send the letters off before he went to grab some breakfast in the great hall with Jack.

North paced around the Pole, as he was worried, not having heard anything from Jack in a month when the child guardian usually stopped by every other day to check in. One of his yeti's, Phil called out to him to let him know that the other Guardians had arrived and were waiting for him in the globe room.

As he joined them, an owl swooped into the room to land on North's shoulder where it held out its leg to show a letter tied from it. Sandy, who knew about the magical communities, flew over to the owl, removed the letter and read it while the owl left.

"What is it Sandy?" Tooth questioned as she, North and Bunny stared at him. Instead of answering he handed the letter to Tooth so she could read it.

"It's from Jamie, he recently found out he's a... wizard. I thought Ombric was the last wizard."

Sandy shook his head and gestured for her to continue reading. "Um, he's attending a school called Hogwarts where he'll learn to control his magic and he..." She trailed off as she read the last part.

"What, what else did he say?" Bunny demanded as the letter fluttered from her hands.

"He found Jack but... but he doesn't look like our Jack. His hair and eyes are brown instead of white and blue, although he does somewhat remember us."

"Somewhat, what is that suppose to mean?" North asked as Bunny picked up the letter.

"He can remember what we look like but not our names, if I'm reading Jamie's letter correctly." Bunny answered as he set the letter down on a near-by table.

"Well what are we waiting for, we must go get Jack and help him remember!" North bellowed and was about to order everyone to his sleigh but never got the chance as Bunny had opened a tunnel up under his feet.

"We'll meet you two at this school... you know how to get there, right." He said to Sandy, who nodded, as he had been to Hogwarts before, and signed that he would show Tooth the way there. Once he had Sandy's promise, Bunny dropped down into his tunnel and him and North where on their way.

End file.
